RIU RENO STREAMING AND VLOGGING CODE OF CONDUCT

Any persons streaming or vlogging during poker tournaments at Run It Up Reno are required to follow these guidelines:

1. You are not permitted to show your cards to your live stream if there is action remaining in the hand. You may briefly show your hand to a live stream only after the hand is over. If you have shown your hand to your stream, you must also show the players at the table at their request.
2. Your recording must not disrupt play or affect the pace of play at the table. You are not permitted to ask the dealer to hold up action, or request they deal or muck at a slower pace. You may not take an extended time to act during any turn for the sake of your recording. Be mindful of the pace and action. Should you consistently disrupt the pace of play at your table, you will be asked to stop recording.
3. Be respectful of the other players at the table. Your recording should not make other players at the table uncomfortable in any way. You must inform all players at your table that you intend to record/stream. Should any player at your table refuse to be recorded, you must stop recording immediately. Do not place cameras or other equipment over the table or the other players. Equipment should not obstruct or hinder the dealer or any player at your table. Do not focus cameras on other players unless they specifically request to be included in your recording, regardless of the action.
4. Any persons that wish to record or live stream during RIU Reno must have a designated Streamer Pass. The Streamer Pass must be worn by you or your designated assistant and must be visible at all times during filming.

Apply for your Streamer Pass at RunItUp.com.

In order to qualify, you must have either a partnered Twitch account or have a minimum of 1,000 subscribers on YouTube.
